

Marijana Hadzima-Nyarko received her B.Sc. degree in civil engineering in January 2001, M.Sc. degree in civil engineering in November 2005 and Ph.D. degree in civil engineering in January 2011 from the Faculty of Civil Engineering, J.J. Strossmayer University of Osijek.

Marijana Hadzima-Nyarko has been employed at the Faculty of Civil Engineering, Josip Juraj Strossmayer University of Osijek since 2001. In 2001 she was employed as a research assistant, in 2011 she was appointed assistant professor and in 2017 she was appointed associate professor.

Since the 2011/12 academic year, when she was appointed assistant professor, she is the course lecturer of the graduate courses: Earthquake Engineering, Earthquake Risk and Masonry Structures and the professional course Massive Structures 1. She has participated in several scientific projects and has been engaged in research in the field of concrete and masonry structures, earthquake engineering and earthquake risk assessment.

She has published 3 author's books and more than 25 scientific papers in WOScc (from which 16 papers are published in CC journals and 7 papers in SCI Expanded journals) and more than 30 scientific conference papers with international peer-review.